Rollo Peters II. is Making Stage Hit

In the fickle world of art few of her followers have a more permanent niche than Charles Rollo Peters, whose creative genius is most frequently expressed in his moonlight themes. The lovely serenity of the Carmel pines, black against the sky, the tiny stars almost imagined rather than suggested and the faint outline of the cross on the old Carmel Mission are subtle processions of individuality.

And now appears Charles Rollo Peters, Jr., his eldest son, who has inherited the genius of his father and the gracious intelligence and idealism of his beautiful mother. This young artist is one of New York's cleverest actors; a producer of the higher type of drama, and a designer of stage settings showing unusual insight and ability.

The Theater Guild owes some of its most successful productions to Mr. Peters. His acting and stage direction in "The Faithful," "John Ferguson" and "Mixed Marriage" were exceptionally fine. Last season he appeared with Elsie Ferguson in "The Varying Shares," one of Zoe Akins' plays. This season he is with the Equity Players, opening in "Malvaloca," a translation of a Spanish play by the Quintero brothers.

Rollo Peters as Leonardo, playing opposite the radiant Jane Cowl, was a most artistic lover. He is gifted with a splendid speaking voice and in his Spanish costume was very picturesque. The play is rather light—it touches no heights or depths but was very pleasing. The New York critics decried this play as most inappropriate for Broadway, and, being fed up on foreign plays as they are, it appears to be a little matter of pride—for the only real successes on the New York stage have been from foreign pens. But, although the play was light, it was full of the atmosphere of old Spain—picturesquely charming and with Jane Cowl and Rollo Peters it made indeed a delightful evening.

Mr. Peters will support Miss Cowl in the forthcoming production of "Romeo and Juliet," which is awaited with much interest. Rollo Peters is the designer of the stage settings and costumes.

Concreting of Ocean Avenue to be Completed February 10

Pouring of concrete is in full sway on Ocean avenue, and the work will now go forward to completion without interruption. It is probable that the entire job will be finished about February 10th.

It will be necessary, in order to have a first-class completed job, for motorists and others to pay strict attention to the traffic rules imposed by the "Street Closed" barriers. The contractor "owns" the street until the work is completed, and may cause arrests for violation of the rules.

In order to accommodate travel on San Carlos highway, Contractor Syd Ruthven has made plans to leave the concrete laying on that intersection until the last. He is not obliged to do this according to specifications.

Monterey Theaters Are Now on the T. and D. Circuit

The three Monterey theatres are now in the general control of the T. & D. Enterprises, Inc. Under the new regime the feature pictures will be of the same high class as those heretofore exhibited at the Strand, Star and Monterey. There will, however, be a better class of comedy and educational films shown. The local management will be a joint affair, with J. E. Moser and George Kinloch handling the bookings, advertising and the thousand and one other details of the show business.

An Urn of Bronze

By Roberta Balfour Thudichum

PERHAPS if he could speak,
Could make the path of duty sweet,
He'd guide aright my errant thought
And wing again my leaden feet.

BUT mute he lies. Dull urn of bronze
Cups all that's left to me of him.
Dared I but lift its lidded seal
To offer frankincense and myrrh,
Butterflies in myriads concealed
Would spring to life anew,
In gossamer of gold revealed and web of silver
Spun from texture of his soul released, reborn!
While I—would kneel—and still I'd kneel
Before an empty urn of bronze.

Centurion Praises Carmel Author

The January "Centurion," house organ of the Century Magazine, has the following concerning one of the popular Carmel writers:

"Frederick R. Bechdolt is a member of the Carmel, California, group of writers. He is married, his wife, too, being a writer; and Mr. Bechdolt says that she puts a good deal of work into his stories in the way of constructive criticism. They have a place at Carmel of a few acres—and saddle horses, which they both enjoy.

"For the last fifteen years Mr. Bechdolt has been writing fiction for a living, his work appearing in many of the best-known magazines which publish much or only fiction. Mr. Bechdolt has, previous to his new book, 'When the West Was Young,' written one novel alone and one in collaboration with James Hopper. The first was a novel of railway construction-camp life; the latter a novel of prison conditions, called '9009,' which made some stir back in 1908. Before Mr. Bechdolt 'put over' fiction as his exclusive occupation, he was a newspaper man for a good many years, and worked in nearly every large city west of the Rockies.

"The interest of the author in our old West is a sort of avocation which he has long followed. As far back as when he was a boy in Mankato, Minn., he found joy in listening to the talk of an old-timer who had trapped, and fought Indians. Through later years in the West—and there were some varied years in Alaska and the mountains of the Pacific Northwest, following his graduation from the University of Washington in '95—he made a sort of hobby of hunting up men who had lived in the Old West—and hearing them yarn about their experiences.

"Mr. Bechdolt tells how the idea of making a group of carefully authenticated tales of old-timers into a volume on the Old West came to him. 'One day in Arizona, while with Capt. Harry Wheeler, former head of the Arizona rangers, it occurred to me, listening to one of those old-timers, that their tales, after all, had as high—sometimes higher—values than the fiction which dealt with the West. The idea of digging up a chronicle of those days from such tales grew out of that.'"

Notable Success of Carmel Artist

Carmelites will remember Jean Hawthorne, daughter of Mrs. Francis Hurtubis, who visited Carmel a year ago and lent such valuable assistance to the Forest Theater Producers during the rehearsals of "Pomander Walk" and "The Confounding of the Witch." Miss Hawthorne has had a most successful season, having appeared in several of the best productions in New York, notably in "He Who Gets Slapped," a Theater Guild production. She is now rehearsing with the Equity Players and expects to appear in a Shakespearian production.

"He Who Gets Slapped" has been one of the best things done in New York. The Pine Cone reviewed this play two years ago and very thoroughly recognized and exploited its possibilities. It requires splendid acting, and Richard Bennett was superb as the clown, who, having been betrayed by his intimates takes grim pleasure in being publicly buffeted about by his fellow circus performers. He runs the whole gamut of emotions with that delicacy of light and shade that bespeaks the perfect artist.

Postcard Week Causes Flood of Mail From Peninsula

The first annual Postcard Week on the Monterey Peninsula was a great success. Postmasters in Carmel, Del Monte, Monterey and Pacific Grove report an exceedingly heavy mailing of peninsula view cards to all parts of the United States and abroad. The committee having the affair in hand is encouraged to go ahead with big plans for next December's postcard week.

City Dads Meet in New Quarters

The trustees and other officials of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea are now in new quarters in the postoffice building on Dolores street, and the first 1923 regular meeting of the trustees was held there on Tuesday night last.

Owing to the absence of Trustee W. T. Kibbler no action was taken on the matter of garbage collection and disposal, though there was some discussion.

A petition was presented requesting the appointment of J. E. Nichols to the position of fire chief. Action was deferred at the suggestion of Nichols himself.

The annual report of the clerk and marshal were read and filed.

Treasurer L. S. Slevin's report for the year showed a balance on hand of $10,640—the largest amount ever in the city coffers.

The Potboiler, New Art Organization

It remains for Los Angeles to bring over the latest Parisian novelty in art exhibitions. The Potboiler is the name of an organization recently formed there under the management of Sigurd Russell, globe-trotter, art critic, and instructor in French in Los Angeles high school.

The purpose of this organization is to endeavor to find a common ground for the artist, the patron of art, and those who like a Latin quarter atmosphere.

Any work of art of a maximum value of fifty dollars and a maximum size of 16x20 may be placed on exhibition without charge. Entertainments will be given weekly, to which an admission fee will be charged. The program will be varied and there will be strange refreshments from many lands. All types and classes will be encouraged to attend. It has been endorsed by every art organization in southern California, and five hundred invitations have been sent to artists to attend the preliminary meeting tomorrow night.

Mr. Russell, who is promoting the movement, spent his vacation in Carmel and put in his time clearing his property on north Dolores, where he will build in the summer. He first came here last July to visit Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Kuster. He has been nine times to Europe and four times to Africa and Asia, but says that Carmel is the most beautiful and satisfying place he has ever visited.

The father of Russell is Edmund Russell, a well known art critic, and his mother is the wife of Richard Hovey, who wrote the famous "Stein" son

I Thank You

To the Public:

I have disposed of my stock in the Pine Cone Press Publishing Corporation to W. L. Overstreet, and have retired from active work on the paper.

I desire to publicly express thanks to those who have so loyally helped me in my efforts to give the public a paper that would best represent the community in which we live.

I bespeak for the owners and founders the same consideration you have given us in the past.

The Pine Cone is an established institution in the town; it is the mouthpiece of the people and should have the loyal support of every person who calls Carmel home.

I shall long remember my work on the Pine Cone with pleasure and regret exceedingly that it is necessary to terminate my connection with it.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY

On this date in 1811 Charles Sumner was born.

THE PLACE OF THE LITTLE CITY PAPER

The story of the newspaper published in the smaller city has significance for the student of American society. The influence of this class of newspapers is close, constant and pervasive.

When the paper appreciates its opportunities and is judiciously conducted, it becomes a member of every family within its field in a way that the great newspaper of the large city cannot rival.

The town paper is never a product of wealth, its capital consisting of the editor's brains and its plant, of copy paper, paste, scissors, table and waste basket.

The success of such newspapers is owing chiefly to the loyalty of the townspeople and the courage and persistence of the proprietor. The loyalty of the editor and of the paper to the community is an asset to any town and deserves its friendship.

There is a strong bond of influence between country weekly and smaller cities' dailies and their readers that can never exist in the relation of the metropolitan daily and the public.

HOW AN INDUSTRY PROFITED BY ADVERTISING

Confronting a serious situation which threatened their industry, the raisin growers of the San Joaquin Valley, through their marketing association, placed upon the markets of the nation a little more than a year ago, a five-cent package of the wonderful sun-maid fruit. This confection they popularized by using a well-planned advertising campaign. Within the space of one year the small package of raisins became so popular as to not alone prove the saving grace for the raisin industry, but the campaign had succeeded so far as to make it necessary that the production of the small package be more than doubled this year.

These items are cited for the information of those who doubt the ability of advertising to sell their products. There are none so blind as those who will not see, and the man, men, corporation, company or firm who will not heed these two outstanding demonstrations of what advertising can accomplish are just marking time until the receiver from the board of trade knocks at their door.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

By Ann Burroughs

Really, Sherlock Holmes Was More Interesting

"The Coming of the Fairies," by Arthur Conan Doyle, was a disappointment because of wrong emphasis and of limitations. Eager as we have been to see the photographs of fairies so widely advertised as the uncertainly authentic contribution of this volume, we weren't particularly interested in an attempt to establish the authenticity of these illustrations, certainly not on the lengths and depths of Conan Doyle's attempts. One believes in fairies or one doesn't. One has seen fairies or one hasn't. There is no middle ground.

But there are a million shades of enjoyment of fairies by believers and unbelievers alike. And to me the happy contribution which this volume might have made would have been a record of reactions to or delights in fairies experienced by the young children whose snapshots of fairies are under discussion. The pictures themselves are thrilling as imaginative poetry is thrilling, or imaginative music. But when one has waded back and forth through Conan Doyle's unconvincing court's evidence for the genuineness of the snapshots one has been continually disappointed by the cumulated indefiniteness and one's interest even in fairies has flagged.

Psychoanalyzing Human Nature

"Simon Called Peter," by Robert Keable, may seem, at first glance, a far cry from Gautier's "Mlle. de Maupin," but, when denuded of their surplus trappings, both novels seem after all rather closely related. Moreover, once the profound resemblance in their philosophies is perceived, it becomes clear that their outer gear is dissimilar in dates and costumings rather than in meaning and tone. Do not people speak in lowered voices, not to be overheard by the children, in both? On their superficial side both are more or less "shocking" to those who enjoy being shocked, but in their innermost significance both are expressing a point of view with which you and I may or may not hold, but which none the less is bound to interest us because we realize that it may be true. This point of view is, to put it briefly, that love cannot maintain itself in human relationships at its highest and truest pitch. Therefore, for the great, the creative soul, this experience had best be transitory, brief, a shining splendor on the horizon of one's uttermost, rather than a dull warp or woof of daily living.

It is not until almost the end of Mr. Keable's book that this larger aspect of its meaning is made clear to us. For more than half the volume one mistakes this for a thesis novel showing the effect of war's realities upon the too formal faith and character of a perfectly respectable Anglican clergyman. It does this also, but this is after all a minor contribution compared with its sweeping deductions as to the nature of nobility and its tremendous conflicts with the claims of personal love.

The novel's characterization is of varying grades. Hilda, the Padre's English fiancee, from whose sympathies his service-experiences so surely sever him, is a correct lay figure—not flesh and blood at all. The best that can be said for her is that there are, unfortunately, too many living automatons exactly like her. Peter, the Padre, is but fairly drawn. At times he seems true and fine, at others weakly inconsistent, actuated by theory rather than by human vitality. Julie Gamlyn is a complex, dynamic personality compounded of madcap whimsicality and real profundity. She it is who conducts the experiment of trying to live utterly true to the dictates of her own being, physical and spiritual, without so much as a reference to the standards of society. The magnificent sensitiveness of her effort and her sacrifice are broadening and ennobling to encounter. Doubtless there are those who will raise the eyebrows and bate the breath at mention of this "questionable" novel, but to the men and women who lived intensely in the topsy-turvy environment of an overseas experience from 1914 to 1919 this book will bring a refreshing review of much that they learned and suffered in those testing times. They will rejoice that this is an understanding book, rather than what it might so easily have been—a moralizing one.

Pine Cone's Log of Literature & Art

Oakland is shortly to have a music week—for the people and not solely for the musicians, the object being to popularize music in the home and daily life of the people. It has been decided to have as a big feature an open air music night, when, led by a chorus of one thousand voices, the mass of the people present will sing a complete program, made up of every description of vocal music, such as hymn tunes, classical songs, old-time songs, operatic and popular selections.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has taken out two $1,000,000 insurance policies—one on its newly engaged director, Eric Von Stroheim, and one on June Mathis, recently engaged as editorial director.

Goldwyn was impelled to take out these two million-dollar insurance policies because of the big productions in view, involving millions of dollars, in which Mr. Von Stroheim and Miss Mathis will individually be concerned.

A school of the drama will be conducted in Berkeley next summer by Samuel J. Hume, director of the Greek Theater. Hume was granted permission by the Berkeley Board of Education to use the high school auditorium, two classrooms and the old gymnasium during the summer vacation period. According to Hume, he plans to open a school of the drama for the instruction of school teachers during the summer session.

When the famous Irish Regiment band reaches California early next year on its first American tour, the organization will appear in four concerts in San Francisco.

This band is not only all Celtic in its membership, but its programs are made up entirely of Irish music. Representative numbers are Wallace's "Maritana," Rimmer's "Bells of Killarney," Carey's "Irish Whispers," Balfe's "Killarney," Coote's "Come Back to Erin," Grady's "Irish Emeralds," and Crawford's "Kathleen Mavourneen." The soloists are Beatrice O'Leary, soprano; John Trenholme, piper, and Jean McNaughton, dancer. The director of the band is Lieutenant J. Andrew Wiggins.

Under the direction of David B. Gally, the Missiontown Players gave three well-done plays at Del Monte hotel Thursday evening last and they have been booked for a return engagement.

Gally's stage settings and lighting effects were received with favorable comment, and the casts of the plays came in for their share of the commendation.

Marie Lambert did her best work in Rita Weiman's "Dawn," and in the satire, "When to Die," written by herself and David Gally.

Gally did a very effective piece of emotional acting in the role of the captain in "Dawn," and Owen White was amusing in "When to Die."

In the holiday number of the San Francisco "News Letter" there appeared a very fine reproduction of Miss M. deNeale Morgan's painting, "The Home of Robert Louis Stevenson," Monterey. A picture of Miss Morgan is also given. Of interest also to Carmelites is the Martinez picture of "Eucalyptus on Piedmont Hills" and Francis Cutting's "Asilomar," the latter being a very fine study of the cypress.

Ignace Jan Paderewski on his return to the concert stage this season is meeting with tremendous success. Although he is scheduled to give six recitals in New York City, every seat for his first appearance was sold weeks in advance, and as much as $25 was offered for a single ticket. The master pianist's American tour will bring him to San Francisco in March.

More Than a Half Billion Dollars Annually from California's Natural Resources

California has a large area in the Sierra Nevadas, much of it more than a mile above the sea. The towering mountains are vast storehouses of mineral wealth. Their streams provide enormous power.

On their slopes stand billions of feet of timber and some of the trees are older than any other living thing.

And dotted over California's surface are oil wells which pour out millions of barrels of "black gold" every month. Such is the natural wealth of this great Commonwealth.

California's Principal Minerals

In the days of '49 California became known as the "Golden State." She still leads in the production of gold, which is produced in thirty-two counties and exists in others. Last year the production of gold in California reached $15,800,000.

But now many other minerals take their place with gold as sources of the State's wealth. More than one-fourth of the nation's output of petroleum last year came from California. Its value was $182,400,000.

More plebeian, but contributing largely to our wealth, were brick, cement, building stone and crushed rock, which aggregated $27,000,000.

And in lesser quantities we find that California's mineral production included also silver, copper, lead, zinc, quicksilver, platinum, natural gas, magnesite, salines, including borax, potash, salt and soda, and miscellaneous industrial minerals. California has the largest iron ore deposits west of the Missouri River.

The total value of all these products taken from California's natural storehouses last year was $244,856,910.

Valuable Timber Resources

To the great wealth of minerals which California's bounty provides must be added $90,000,000 for the lumber cut annually.

Great forests of white, yellow and sugar pine and fir sweep southward from the northern boundaries of the State to the San Jacinto Range. In the Coast Range are great forests of redwood.

California contains twenty National Forests, whose total area is more than 24,000,000 acres.

It is estimated that these National Forests contain 120,000,000,000 board feet of standing timber, mostly pine, redwood, fir and cedar. The value of this timber is $250,000,000.

Water Power

And finally are tremendous and valuable resources in water power, partly developed and partly undeveloped.

It is estimated that there is available about 5,000,000 horsepower in California. This figure includes only the power which is now looked upon as practical—power which may be obtained by the type of plants which is now being installed.

About 1,250,000 horsepower has already been developed in the State and plans are now under way for the development of large amounts of additional power.

How You Can Serve Your State

This advertisement is one of a series of three, the first devoted to telling of California's agricultural wealth, the second to California's natural resources, and the third to California's industries. These are facts of which you can well be proud.

Beautiful booklets and descriptive literature about California have been prepared by such organizations as Californians, Inc., San Francisco, by the All-Year Club of Southern California, Los Angeles, and by the San Diego-California Club, San Diego.

There are thousands of people in other states who have no conception of California's greatness. Some of them are your friends. Help us tell them.

If you will send to the Southern Pacific Company a list of the names and addresses of your friends, living elsewhere, whom you would like to have receive this series of advertisements as well as the California literature prepared by these organizations, which have for their sole purpose the advertising of California, we will see that your friends get this California literature.

Send Your List Today

Your friends will be glad to know these facts. The list of names you send us will be turned over to your own Chamber of Commerce or other civic organization, and literature will be sent telling them interesting facts about your own particular community.

Simply attach your list to the coupon below and send it to us—no obligation on your part. Do it today before you forget. In this way you will help to spread this message of California's greatness throughout the land and perform a valuable service not only to your State but to yourself and to your community.
